1. INTRODUCTION
Interpretation in translating is very unlimited, no one stating that there is only one way to translate. In Indonesian Dictionary translation is the process of copying a language or transferring languages from one language to another. Lubis (2001: 81-82) revealed that a good translation is a translation that is able to describe what the text wants to say is translated Translation is the transfer of meaning from one language to another language or the transfer of meaning from the source language to the target language. Text translation is done with the aim that people who do not understand the language of the text can understand the contents of the text, so that the message or message conveyed by the author can be understood by the reader. The process of transferring languages when translating texts must be done carefully and clearly in order to get good results of text translation.

The use of academic terms for the development of teaching, research, and community service needs special attention in order to be equal with the general guidelines for Indonesian spelling. The attention of these terms is given as a solution to the imprecision of academic terms derived from English uptake.

A lot of research still considers spelling to be paid attention to without looking at the uptake of the original language, thus creating overlapping topics (Sari: 2014, Nirmawan: 2017). The accuracy and acceptability of the results of the translation are also not heeded, so that new problems emerge that can actually be further investigated (Trisnawati: 2017, Sayogie: 2009). Based on the research gap, researcher develop special attention in text editing for English to Indonesian spelling. The attention of these terms is given as a solution to the imprecision of academic terms derived from English uptake.

2. RESEARCH METHOD

Shank (2002: 5) defines qualitative research as “a form of systematic empirical inquiry into meaning”. By systematic he means “planned, ordered and public”, following rules agreed upon by members of the qualitative research community. By empirical, he means that this type of inquiry is grounded in the world of experience. Inquiry into meaning says researchers try to understand how others make sense of their experience. Denzin and Lincoln (2000: 3) claim that qualitative research involves an interpretive and naturalistic approach: “This means that qualitative researchers learn thing in its natural setting, attempting to make idea, interpreting, phenomena in terms of the meanings’ people bring to them.

This article is systematically analyzed by descriptive qualitative and using English to Indonesian datum, the collection techniques in the form of literature review on articles that have errors writing academic terms at the word level and analyzed in depth with indirect observation methods and expert interview in the field of text editing. Datum sources are analyzed their translation techniques and then validated based on accuracy and acceptability to get the datum processed in the findings and discussions. This study uses a text editing approach from translation activities.

3. DISCUSSION

Basicallly, translation is a process of transferring the intent contained in one language to another. Larson stated "translation consists of transferring the meaning of the source language into receptor language "(1984: 3) Larson simply defines translation as a process of transferring meaning from source language to target language. In addition, Larson also mentioned "it is meaning which is being transferred and must be held constant. Only the form changes ". From this statement it can be concluded that which experiencing change in translation is only its form. Mean existing in the source language are transferred to this target language and meaning must be constant.

Transferring language has many difficulties for making equal with the source text. Editing the text is the best way if the translation results inappropriate. An editor certainly does not master all the words that exist in one particular language, let alone the terms in a particular scientific field. Therefore, an editor must familiarize him/herself with the dictionary, it can be dictionary of grammar, bilingual, or dictionary of terms.

The editors are also required to have language sensitivity because they are always associated with spelling, grammar, and dictionaries (Bowers, 1962: 1-6). If we are an editor, we must know which sentences are coarse, which are subtle; must know which words to avoid and which ones to use; and must know when certain sentences or words can be used or avoided.

An editor is also required to have extensive knowledge and insight. That is, she/he must read many books, magazines and newspapers. In addition, she/he must also absorb information through audio-visual media (Johnston, 1983: 55). In other words, an editor cannot miss information. An editor must also be thorough and patient. He must carefully edit every sentence, every word, and every term used by the author. He must carefully examine whether the words, sentences, and terms are printable or not.
